FARM SURPLUS BARTER

The Senate April 1 passed, by voice vote, a bill (S 1314) to extend for one year, until June 30, 1958, the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954 (PL 480, 83rd Congress). An attempt by Minority Leader William F. Knowland (Calif.) to eliminate an Administration-requested provision to permit barter with Soviet satellites was defeated on a 23-54 roll-call vote. Twenty-one Republicans voted with Knowland; 19 backed the Administration's stand. Only two Democrats voted for the Knowland amendment, 35 against it. (For voting, see chart p. 418)

As passed by the Senate, S 1314 increased from $3 billion to $4 billion the authorization for sale of farm surpluses to friendly countries for their currencies and increased from $500 million to $800 million the authorization for foreign relief grants. It also relaxed restrictions under the 1954 Act to permit relief donations and barter of farm surpluses for strategic and durable commodities with Russian satellites. Knowland sought to eliminate this provision. Sales for foreign currency in the satellites would not be permitted by the bill,

BACKGROUND -- S 1314 was reported (S Rept 188) by the Senate Agriculture and Forestry Committee March 26. (Weekly Report, p. 364) A provision permitting the Administration to barter surpluses with Communist satellites was included by the Senate in its 1956 extension of PL 480 but was eliminated by the House, (1956 Almanac, p. 489)

AMENDMENT REJECTED

William F. Knowland (R Calif.) -- Delete the bill's provision eliminating ban on barter deals with satellite nations; April 1. Roll-call vote, 23-54.

DEBATE -- March 29 -- Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.) -- "The repeal of section 304 (the barter ban) is related directly to certain negotiations which have been taking place between the United States Government and the Government of Poland By sharing our blessings of food abundance with the peoples who seek to break away from the Soviet tyranny, we can make American food the yeast of freedom.... We should understand clearly that we are taking a calculated risk by such measures, but it is only the risk that the yeast will not rise. American food cannot be hurled back at us. All we have to lose is the food itself '

April 1 -- Allen J. Ellender (D La.) -- "It is my hope that the Committee on Foreign Relations, when it reports a bill authorizing the expenditure of more funds for foreign aid,..will take into consideration the expenditures we make as a result of lending back to purchasing countries funds derived from sales of surplus commodities.'

Knowland -- Called his amendment "the opening skirmish in a great debate on public policy, particularly as to whether the money of the American taxpayers...should now be used on a program of sustaining the economic systems of Communist countries behind the Iron Curtain."

Jacob K. Javits (R N.Y.) -- "All we are doing is giving permission to the President to use the program as a weapon of foreign policy."

ZWICKER NOMINATION

The Senate April 1 confirmed, by a 70-2 roll-call vote, the nomination of Ralph W. Zwicker to the permanent rank of brigadier general and temporary rank of major general in the Army of the United States. Joseph R. McCarthy (R Wis.) and George W. Malone (R Nev.) cast the dissenting votes. (For voting, see chart, p. 418)

BACKGROUND -- The Senate Armed Services Committee March 22 favorably reported, by a vote of 12-0

(two abstaining), Zwicker's nomination.

Zwicker figured in the 1954 Army-McCarthy dispute when he refused to give McCarthy information about the activities and honorable discharge of Irving Peress, an Army dentist, whom McCarthy termed a "Fifth Amendment Communist." McCarthy said that testimony by Zwicker showed that he was "not fit to wear" a general's uniform. (1954 Almanac, p. 343)

DEBATE -- April 1 -- McCarthy -- Charged that Zwicker, in March, 1955, testimony, perjured himself.... "I was sure we had seen the last of him as an Army officer -- that his next appearance would probably be in a criminal court. Little did I dream that he would, in effect, be honored for the crime by being promoted to major general." (1955 Almanac, p. 516)

John Stennis (D Miss.), Richard B. Russell (DGa.) --The Committee found no legal evidence of perjury by Zwicker and considered his record as an officer "out-standing."

BUDGET CONTROLS

The Senate April 4 passed by voice vote and sent to the House a bill (S 1585) authorizing a Joint Committee on the Budget. It was the fourth time the Senate approved the proposal, which has never received approval by the House.

PROVISIONS -- See Weekly Report, p. 364.

LABOR-HEW APPROPRIATION

The House April 4 passed by voice vote, after eight days of debate and 14 roll-call votes on amendments, a $2,8 billion appropriation bill (HR 6287) for the Departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare, Before the roll-call votes, it had acted on 31 floor amendments. Tentative cuts of $68.6 million first were voted, all but $15 million of which were overturned by the roll calls. In addition, the House approved $118.8 million in cuts recommended by the Appropriations Committee. (Weekly Report, p. 389)

The largest single cut that had been achieved by floor amendment -- $50 million, the entire requested appropriation for Federal grants to cities for sewage-treatment plants -- was returned to the bill. The House allotted the Labor Department $349 million and allotted $2.5 billion to the Department of Health, Education and The final $2,846,676,581 total was $133 Welfare. million less than President Eisenhower requested.

Final passage ended what was reportedly the longest modern-day debate on an appropriations bill.

Zwicker's Nomination to Higher Rank Confirmed 70-2; Amendment to Ban Barter with Red Satellites Rejected

- 17. Confirmation of the nomination of Brig. Gen. Ralph W. Zwicker to be brigadier general in the Regular Army of the U.S. and also his nomination to the temporary rank of major general. Confirmed 70-2 (D 35-0; R 35-2), April 1, 1957. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position. (See story,

CIVIL RIGHTS

COMMITTEE -- House Judiciary.

ACTION -- April 1 reported a bill (HR 6127 - H Rept 291) modeled closely on President Eisenhower's civil rights proposals. (Weekly Report, p. 364) Two minority reports strongly opposing the measure were filed by eight southern Committee members.

The bill, as reported, provided for: establishment of a bipartisan commission to investigate alleged civil rights violations; an additional Assistant Attorney General in charge of a Justice Department Civil Rights Division; authority for the Federal Government to seek civil court relief in civil rights cases, and additional legislation to aid enforcement of right to vote laws.

The majority report said the bill "neither encroaches upon nor diminishes" respective state or Federal powers, since it merely substituted civil proceedings for criminal proceedings. "In the field of civil rights," the report said, "the Federal Government must assume the ultimate responsibility for the protection of individuals when state and local enforcement and protection of such rights fail." Committee hearings indicated "the problem is not a provincial one but a national problem," the report said, adding that fears of government interference in "traditional" states rights were "wholly unwarranted and unfounded."

Two minority reports said the "most eloquent argument" against the bill's passage was the fact that no Federal civil rights legislation had been enacted since 1875. The reports argued against providing "powers of a complete czar" for the Attorney General, and said he would become a "father-confessor, and special counsel, at public expense, to every person who fancies that he has a civil-rights grievance." The reports termed "truly shocking" provisions giving the Attorney General authority to institute civil actions, and said the proposal was "an insult to the states, the judicial systems of the states, and all public officers of the states," The proposed bipartisan commission was criticized as having "solely a political standard" instead of geographic considerations

The minority reports were signed by Republicans Richard H. Poff (Va.) and William C. Cramer (Fla.) and Democrats Edwin E. Willis (La.), James B. Frazier (Tenn.), E.L. Forrester (Ga.), William M. Tuck (Va.), Robert T. Ashmore (S.C.) and John Dowdy (Texas).

SCHOOL CONSTRUCTION AID

COMMITTEE -- House Education and Labor, General Education Subcommittee.

ACTION -- April 4, by a 6-1 vote, approved a fiveyear, $2 billion program of Federal school construction Rep. Ralph W. Gwinn (R N.Y.) cast the only dissenting vote. Under the Subcommittee bill $400 million in Federal aid would go to the states each year on a 50-50 matching basis. Half of the $400 million would be distributed on the basis of need and half on the basis of school age population. The bill was a compromise between proposals by Rep. Augustine B. Kelley (D Pa.) and the Administration. (Weekly Report, p. 336)

PRESIDENTIAL DISABILITY

COMMITTEE -- House Judiciary, Special Subcommittee on the Study of Presidential Disability.

BEGAN HEARINGS -- On Administration and other proposals for deciding when a President is temporarily disabled. (See p. 429)

BACKGROUND -- The Subcommittee held hearings in April, 1956, but no further action was taken on the subject -- reportedly because Congressional leaders thought it would be "inappropriate" for Congress to act in an election year, (1956 Almanac, p. 591)

President Eisenhower March 29 recommended to Congressional leaders a constitutional amendment that would provide two ways for a Vice President to take over the duties of a temporarily disabled President, Under one plan the President himself could inform the Vice President in writing that he was disabled and wished temporarily to be relieved of his duties. When he was able to resume his duties, the President again could inform the Vice President in writing. Under the second plan, if the President were unable or unwilling to declare himself disabled, the Cabinet by majority vote could decide whether he was able to continue in office.

The White House said it was doubtful that the proposed amendment would apply to President Eisenhower.

Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn (D Texas) said the President's request would not "have much help out of me," Rayburn said neither a constitutional amendment nor a new law was needed. Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson (Texas) said the plan would be given the Senate's "respectful consideration." Chairman Emanuel Celler (D N.Y.) of the House Judiciary Committee opposed giving the authority to Cabinet officials who, he said, "would refuse to declare their benefactor (the President) totally disabled."

TESTIMONY -- April 1 -- Attorney General Herbert Brownell Jr. backed the Administration plan by which the Cabinet would declare the President temporarily disabled should he be unwilling or unable to do so himself. Brownell said Cabinet officials owed their highest lovalty to the Constitution, not the President, and the fact that they were personal friends of the President would give added public support to their opinion of his inability.

Brownell opposed a plan (HR 6510), sponsored by Rep. Kenneth B. Keating (R N.Y.), that would create a Presidential Inability Commission composed of members of the legislative, executive and judicial branches of the government. Brownell said it would be "unwise to establish legal machinery for giving the President physical and mental examinations." (The Keating proposal would empower the Commission to require the President to submit to these examinations, and to declare the existence of inability by a two-thirds vote.) Brownell said such a program would "be an affront to a President's personal dignity" and would also "degrade the Presidential office

Brownell said in his opinion determination of Presidential disability under the Constitution rested with the Vice President, and it would take a constitutional amendment to transfer this responsibility to the Cabinet.

ALASKAN STATEHOOD

COMMITTEE -- House Interior and Insular Affairs, Territorial and Insular Affairs Subcommittee.

CONCLUDED HEARINGS -- On HR 50 and similar bills providing statehood for Alaska. (Weekly Report, p. 416)

TESTIMONY -- March 29 -- Rep. Thomas M. Pelly (R Wash.) recommended a period of commonwealth status, similar to that of Puerto Rico, for Alaska before state-But Pelly said he would vote for statehood if a "good" bill were brought to the House floor.

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- April 3 -- A Democratic move in the House Subcommittee to report the bill without amendment to the full Committee was blocked on a point of order. The motion by Rep. Adam Clayton Powell Jr. (D N.Y.) was challenged by Rep. James A. Haley (D Fla.) on the grounds that no Republican Subcommittee members were in attendance and a quorum was not present.

FOREIGN AID STUDY

COMMITTEE -- Special Senate Committee to Study the Foreign Aid Program.

gram. (Weekly Report, p. 413)

TESTIMONY -- March 29 -- Sen. Henry C. Dworshak (R Idaho) recommended the "overhauling and reappraisal" of the United States Information Services and "the elimination of costly press services" that competed with private agencies. Dworshak also said the U.S. practice of supporting foreign currencies at "official rates" should be eliminated.

Clement Johnston, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce of the U.S., said "large windfall profits" were being made in Laos, Cambodia and Vietnam as a result of manipulation of currencies.

April 1 -- Rutgers University President Lewis Webster Jones reported on a study he made for the Committee in Afghanistan, Pakistan, India and Ceylon.

John A. Hannah, president of Michigan State University and former Assistant Secretary of Defense, said his study of the foreign aid program in the Far East indicated mutual benefits to the U.S. and the countries involved. Hannah said "false notions of economy should not lead us to be parsimonious in the quality of training provided or the quality or quantity of equipment made available.'

April 3 -- Eric Johnston, chairman of the President's International Development Advisory Board, said it would "take a long period" to stabilize economies of underdeveloped nations to the point where private investment could take over. He said the United States should reconcile itself to a program of foreign economic assistance for a "protracted period of time.

Allan B. Kline, former president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, said "as things now stand" it would be "worth the money" for the U.S. to continue military and economic assistance to Yugoslavia. Kline said Yugoslavian "determination not to be part of the Russian bloc is real." He said it would be "a good idea" for Tito to visit the U.S.

Sen. Jacob K. Javits (R N.Y.) said U.S. foreign aid was "grossly inadequate to meet the Communist chal-lenge" and recommended private foreign investment as a way of counteracting the inadequacy. He urged that an executive agency be established to serve as a "central coordinating medium for American business."

HAWAIIAN STATEHOOD

COMMITTEE -- Senate Interior and Insular Affairs. BEGAN HEARINGS -- On a bill ($ 50) to provide statehood for Hawaii. (Weekly Report, p. 416)

TESTIMONY -- April 1 -- Hawaii Del. John A. Burns (D) and Gov. Samuel Wilder King (R) said Hawaii met all the traditional requirements for statehood.

Lorrin P. Thurston, chairman of the Hawaii Statehood Commission, said results of investigations by United States brokerage and investment groups showed large investors were convinced that "the Communists in Hawaii are not a significant factor in the political and economic future of the islands."

Deputy Attorney General William P. Rogers, in a letter to Chairman Henry M. Jackson (D Wash.), said in judging Hawaii's statehood qualifications "consideration must be given to the extent of influence and control Communists...may be able to exert, particularly through the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union in the islands."

Mike Musoka, representing the Japanese Citizens

League, also endorsed Hawaiian statehood,

April 2 -- Under Secretary of Interior Hatfield Chilson and Vice Admiral George L. Russell, deputy chief of Naval Operations, said the extent of Communist activity was no reason to deny statehood to the islands.

Paul Butler, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, supported S 50.

PRICE DISCRIMINATION

COMMITTEE -- Senate Judiciary, Antitrust and Monopoly Subcommittee.

CONTINUED HEARINGS -- On a bill (S11) to tighten regulations that prevent a supplier from granting price concessions to favored customers. (Weekly Report, p. 413)

TESTIMONY -- March 28 -- Assistant Attorney General Victor R. Hansen said new legislation discouraging price reductions to some retailers "only at the cost of reducing prices to all may well end by reducing them

March 29 -- Watson Rogers, president of the National Food Brokers Assn., said "many thousands" of small businessmen would be "eliminated" unless Congress passed a law discourgaging price cuts by wholesalers to favored customers.

Matt Triggs of the American Farm Bureau Federation and Otis Ellis of the National Oil Jobbers Council opposed S 11. James W. Cassedy of the Motor and Equipment Wholesalers Assn, supported the bill,

April 2 -- Supporting S 11 were Henry Bison, National Assn. of Retail Grocers; Angus McDonald, National Farmers Union; and George J. Burger, National Federation of Independent Business.

April 3 -- Edward R. Johnston of the American Bar Assn. testified in opposition to S 11. Favoring the bill were Jack T. Jennings, Cooperative League of the U.S.; George H. Frates, National Assn. of Retail Druggists, and Rep. Wright Patman (D Texas).

April 4 -- Winston W. Marsh of the National Tire Dealers and Retreaders Assn. supported S 11 and said "the independent tire dealer has no economic defense against unwarranted price discrimination...,to survive he needs legal defense."

HOUSING PROGRAM

COMMITTEE -- House Banking and Currency.

ACTION -- April 4 -- Ordered reported an omnibus housing bill (HR 6659) that would lower down payments on new homes and provide more than $2.5 billion of new mortgage financing assistance. The Committee approved use of $1 billion in National Service Life Insurance reserves held for payment of wartime GI policies. The Administration had opposed use of these funds.

 ${\color{blue} \textbf{COMMITTEE -- Senate Banking and Currency, Housing Subcommittee.} }$

CONCLUDED HEARINGS -- On the Administration housing programs and bills to improve the flow of mortgage credit to housing. (Weekly Report, p. 416)

TESTIMONY -- April 1 -- Administration officials opposed expansion of the low-rent public housing program to a level of 200,000 units yearly. Housing and Home Finance Administrator Albert M. Cole and Public Housing Commissioner Charles E. Slusser said the current annual level of 35,000 units was sufficient.

Boris Shishkin of the AFL-CIO housing committee and Bernard Weitzer, representing the Jewish War Veterans, backed the increase to 200,000 units.

Commissioner Joseph P. McMurray of the New York State Division of Housing, urged establishment of a central mortgage banking facility to provide additional funds for housing investment.

Miss Frankie Childers of the National Institute of Social Welfare suggested that Congress approve additional funds to buy mortgages on apartments for the elderly.

April 2 -- Edward D. Hollander, national director of Americans for Democratic Action, urged the increase in housing units. Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley (D) said "false economy" should not hold up slum clearance and new housing.

April 3 -- Sen. Wayne Morse (D Ore.) said there was an urgent need for an expanded urban renewal program and an expanded public housing program.

TVA FINANCING

COMMITTEE -- House Public Works, Flood Control Subcommittee.

BEGAN HEARINGS -- On bills relating to financing of the Tennessee Valley Authority. (1956 Almanac, p. 616)

TESTIMONY -- March 28 -- Rep. Robert E. Jones (D Ala.) urged approval of his bill (HR 3236) giving TVA authority to finance future expansion of power facilities through the sale of revenue bonds, rather than Congressional appropriation.

March 29 -- G.O. Wessenauer, TVA power manager, denied charges the HR 3236 would free future projects from Congressional control. He said TVA still would have to report to Congress on any construction plans, and Congress would have adequate time to block any project it disapproved.

April 2-- Representatives of the Tennessee Valley Public Power Assn. urged approval of a self-financing plan for TVA.

April 3 -- Wessenauer said the fiscal 1958 budget did not ask money for new TVA construction, but only for completion of projects already underway. Future construction, he said, depended on Congressional approval of the bond proposal.

Clyde Ellis of the Rural Electric Cooperative Assn. urged approval of the revenue-bond plan.

POSTAL RATE INCREASE

COMMITTEE -- House Post Office and Civil Service.
CONTINUED HEARINGS -- On bills (HR 5835, 5839)
to increase postal rates. (Weekly Report, p. 181, 415)
TESTIMONY -- March 29 -- Rep. John Taber (R N.Y.)
supported proposals for increased rates, said the Post Office supported proposals for increased rates; said the Post Office was running so far behind financially "it is a menace to our whole Government solvency."

J.M. George, president of the National Assn. of Direct Selling Companies, said all rate-making functions should be returned to Congress, but no rate-making should be undertaken until "a definite Congressional policy" was established.

April 2 -- A.L. Cole, general business manager of the Reader's Digest Assn., said the Post Office was an "unregulated monopoly" run on a "high cost" and "inefficient" basis.

Miss Porter Cowles, representing the Assn. of American University Presses, said book rates would go up 25 percent if postal rates were raised.

RELATED DEVELOPMENTS -- April 1 -- Postmaster General Arthur E, Summerfield told the Senate Appropriations Treasury and Post Office Subcommittee he might have to end Saturday mail deliveries and postal money order services if Congress did not restore a $58 million House-approved cut in the fiscal 1958 postal appropriation. (Weekly Report, p. 219)

April 3 -- The House Appropriations Treasury and Post Office Subcommittee voted to give the Post Office Department an additional $17 million for fiscal 1957 operating expenses, despite Summerfield's testimony that unless the Department received an extra $47 million there would be drastic service curtailments on April 6.

April 4 -- Summerfield told "an emergency press conference" he was "heartsick" at the necessity to decide within 48 hours on Department cutbacks.

Committee Briefs

NEWSMEN'S PASSPORTS

William Worthy, Baltimore (Md.) Afro-American reporter who defied a State Department ban on travel to Communist China, March 29 went before the Senate Judiciary Constitutional Rights Subcommittee to protest the Department's delay in processing his application for passport renewal. Also opposing the travel ban were representatives of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, Saturday Review, American Newspaper Guild, Overseas Press Club and American Civil Liberties Union. (Weekly Report, p. 37, 375)

BILL BOARDS

The Senate Public Works Public Roads Subcommittee March 29 concluded hearings on a bill (S 963) to control advertising along the 41,000-mile Interstate Highway System after being told by Federal Highway Administrator Bertram D. Tallamy, that billboards on express highways would be "highly detrimental" to the safe movement of high-speed traffic. Chairman Albert Gore (D Tenn.) said he thought there was no support in the Subcommittee for an Administration plan to penalize states that permitted billboards (Weekly Report, p. 413, 427)

TEXAS SENATE ELECTION

Texas voters April 2 elected Ralph Yarborough (D), 53, to fill the remaining 19 months of the term of former Sen. Price Daniel (D) who Jan. 15 resigned to become governor. Although there were 19 active contestants, the principal contest was among Yarborough, standard-bearer of Texas' "liberal" Democrats, and "conservative" Rep.-At-Large Martin Dies (D), 56, and Republican Thad Hutcheson, 41. (Weekly Report, p. 402)

Results bore out Dies' March 30 prediction that the election issue would be "conservative" vs. "liberal," rather than Republican vs. Democrat. Of the three candidates' total vote, in incomplete returns, Yarborough polled 40.4 percent, Dies and Hutcheson polled 33.2 and 26.4 percent respectively, or a combined "conservative" vote of 59.6 percent. The result in the vote-heavy larger cities, which traditionally vote "conservative," showed that votes for Hutcheson and Dies balanced each other, permitting Yarborough to build up his margin in smaller cities and rural areas.

With Hutcheson the one major GOP candidate against five serious Democratic contenders, observers had seen a real possibility normally Democratic Texas might send a Republican to the Senate in the winner-take-all election. Election of a GOP Senator would have brought the Senate's party division to 48-48, opening the way for GOP Senate control. President Eisenhower, who Jan. 28 had endorsed Hutcheson's candidacy, April 3 said the Texas election showed the need for harder work on the part of the Republican party. (Weekly Report, p. 429)

Incomplete returns showed the following results for the top six candidates -- five Democrats, one Republican:

Yarborough, 310,842; Dies, 255,016; Hutcheson, 202,721; State Sen. Searcy Bracewell, 13,951; Attorney James P. Hart, 4,181; State Agriculture Commissioner John C. White, 4,167.

Yarborough's main platform plank was a pledge to work for a raise in income tax exemptions from $600 to $800. He supported the oil depletion allowance, a 50 percent cut in foreign aid to finance additional assistance to drought areas; was opposed to Federal school aid if it meant Federal control and use of force to racially integrate public schools.

MICHIGAN ELECTION

In the first statewide election since the 1956 Presidential election, Michigan Democrats April 1 swept the state government's administrative board for the first time in state history. The board, made up of the state's top office holders, exercises general supervisory control over administrative departments. Since 1954 Democrats have won 27 of 30 contests in four statewide elections. The only statewide top office currently held by a Republican is that of U.S. Sen. Charles E. Potter, whose term expires in 1959. Republicans continue to control the state legislature, and hold 12 of 18 Congressional seats.

The major contests were the two posts held by Republicans -- state highway commissioner and state superintendent of public instruction. John C. Mackie (D), 35, Flint surveyor, won the highway commissioner's post from George M. Foster, chief deputy highway commissioner, 479,714 votes to 436,072, with 4,296 of 5,181 precincts reported. Lynn M. Bartlett (D), 52, assistant superintendent of Grosse Pointe schools, won the education post, defeating Edgar L. Harden, president of Northern Michigan College at Marquette, by a margin of 470,816 to 410,571 with 4,280 precincts reported.

In non-partisan voting, three Democratic nominees, two of them incumbents, won contests with Republican nominees to continue a five to three Democratic-Republican ratio on the state supreme court.

State Roundup

CALIFORNIA -- Los Angeles Mayor Norris Poulson (Republican ex-Rep. 1943-45; 1947-53) April 2 was reelected to a second four-year term in a non-partisan primary election. Victory in the general election is assured when a candidate receives more votes than all his opponents combined in the primary.

ILLINOIS -- Charles J. Fleck, resigned Cook County public administrator, March 29 pleaded innocent to an indictment charging him and six others with conspiracy to commit perjury and inducing perjury. (Weekly Report, p. 401)

MISSOURI -- St. Louis Mayor Raymond R. Tucker (D) April 2 won reelection to a second term.

NEW YORK -- Sen, Irving M, Ives (R) March 31 said he had been "planning right along" to run for reelection in 1958.... Gov. Averell Harriman (D) March 31 said the 1957 state legislature had evaded its responsibility on many counts and was guilty of "fiscal irresponsibility." Harriman conceded that the GOP-controlled legislature made notable progress in some fields but he credited this to "vigorous Democratic leadership and the force of public opinion, assisted by an alert press." In a differing opinion, GOP State Chairman L. Judson Morhouse said the Republican majority had continued a record of "sound advances in keeping with the progressive aspirations" of the state. Harriman said he was considering calling a special session because of his dissatisfaction with some of the actions taken this year.

VIRGINIA -- State Sen. Ted Dalton (R) March 26 said if he ran for governor in 1957 it would be on a plank of "fighting to the last ditch" against public school integration in Virginia. Dalton said the policy of Gov. Thomas B. Stanley (D), Sen. Harry Flood Byrd (D) and Democratic gubernatorial candidate Lindsay Almond, state attorney general, was "one of feeble surrender, not resistance" to integration.

SPECIAL STUDIES FAVOR LONG-TERM AID PLAN

Which way foreign aid? After a decade or more of voting funds to finance the military and economic strength of foreign countries, Congress and the executive in 1956 called for an appraisal of the purpose and principles of the United States Mutual Security Program. (1956 Almanac, p. 641) The fruits of that study have appeared in a series of reports issued during recent weeks. (See box, p. 426, and Weekly Report, p. 413)

The reports, as expected, have differed on many points. One theme, however, has appeared and reappeared with strong emphasis in the studies: That world conditions and national self-interest make continuation of foreign aid programs a necessity for the foreseeable future. As a corollary, the reports have urged Congress to put the Mutual Security Program on a permanent or long-term legal foundation.

This recommendation, however, faces a doubtful reception this year. The strong drive for economy in Government makes many legislators reluctant to authorize another long-term spending program. The advisors' arguments for a long-term foreign aid program and typical Congressional comments are summarized in this Fact Sheet.

The desirability of the United States undertaking a long-range commitment on foreign aid, both military and economic, was stressed in many of the recent advisory reports. The most systematic treatment of the subject was in a study, Administrative Aspects of United States Foreign Assistance Programs, prepared by the Brookings Institution for the Special Senate Committee to Study the Foreign Aid Program, and released March 24. These excerpts from that study outline the present procedures and possible alternatives:

Aid Policy Tentative

"Foreign assistance is, at most, only tentatively established as a continuing policy of the United States. To be sure, the basic legislation is permanent in the sense that it has no specific expiration date.... The Mutual Security Act of 1954, as amended, declares it to be the policy of the United States to continue, as long as such danger to the peace of the world and to the security of the United States persists, to make available to free nations and peoples' certain kinds of assistance. The Act of 1954, however, authorized appropriations for only fiscal year 1955.... Assuming that some kind of foreign assistance program will continue for several years to come,...what kind of legislative commitments should the Congress make with respect to the continuity of foreign assistance?...

"The first alternative would be for the Congress to enact legislation establishing comprehensive foreign assistance as a standing policy of the United States for an indefinite period of time.... Aside from the worldwide political effects of such an unequivocal commitment, there would be a great many administrative advantages. The commitment would provide the firm basis, which is now lacking, for building appropriate United States administrative institutions and for developing long-range military and economic development plans in collaboration with other nations. A commitment of this kind...would strengthen the position of American administrations in their discussions and negotiations with other governments.... At the same time, United States commitments would not be irrevocable because the level of expenditures would be reviewed periodically in the appropriations process.... With permanent status, programming, fiscal and personnel practices could be developed that would be far more efficient than the present ones....

"The main (drawback) would be the absence of the annual full-scale review of the substantive legislation, Congress' control would perhaps not be as detailed and regular as it is now The legislation might get out of date...or the executive branch might have to be given broader authority...than would be desirable from the viewpoint of general Congressional control.... It can be argued....full-scale annual review serves a valuable educational function by drawing public attention to the program and the issues involved.... Suggestions are also occasionally made that uncertainty about the continuation of American aid tends to produce a more cooperative attitude on the part of other nations than would be the case if the program were permanent.... In general, however, the weight of experience seems to be with the long-range partnership approach rather than the 'keep them guessing' approach.

Show Intentions

"A second alternative...would be for the Congress to enact legislation expressing its intent to continue the program for a substantial period of time -- possibly 5, 10, 15 or 20 years -- and authorizing appropriations for that period.... Such a legislative commitment, if it were not for too short a period, would provide a basis for long-range planning and sufficient stability to develop effective personnel and internal administrative practices.

"A third alternative would be to put some types of aid on a permanent or continuing basis with appropriate financing authorized, but to make annual decisions about the future and magnitude of other types There is widespread agreement...that technical cooperation should be a long-range undertaking and that significant results are to be expected only over a number of years.... The chief advantage of this alternative would lie in retaining the possibility of annual review of those parts of the assistance program that the Congress might be most uncertain about, while giving other portions the benefits of stability and permanence.... The principal argument against this alternative is based upon a doubt that the categories of technical, economic and military assistance are really separable in practice.... Different legislative authorizations might tend to perpetuate an already artificial distinction between the various types of aid

Continue Current Method

"The fourth alternative would be to leave the situation unchanged.... The advantages of this are ... a fullscale annual review of both legislation and appropriations. The Congress remains firmly in control with opportunities for continuous adjustment to the world situation. The disadvantages are: large expenditures of administrative time on reports, presentations and hearings; continued improvisation with regard to personnel; difficult negotiating positions for the administrators as they deal with other countries; and programming that must concentrate on the short run and is severely handicapped in reaping the benefits of long-range planning and large projects.

The Brookings Institution study also noted the general practice of appropriating foreign aid funds annually and requiring they be obligated within the next year. It summarized the arguments on the existing system and the possible alternatives:

"One-year appropriations, it is argued, tend to keep the Congress firmly in control of policy problems The annual return to the Congress for more funds is a constant reminder to the agencies not to obligate for any purpose they are not immediately willing to justify. There is also the argument that limited appropriations make for a taut programming process because it is necessary for the agencies to move expeditiously in order to get decisions made and funds committed without the delays that might occur if the funds were available for a long period

"The opponents of the present system generally stress the need for greater flexibility. They insist that the complicated nature of foreign assistance programming ...both the internal planning and the negotiating with foreign governments -- makes futile any attempt to force the process into rigid one-year cycles It is also argued that the limited availability period ... results in worse, not better, project choices

Obligate for Longer Periods

"Arguments such as these lead to the second general alternative course of action. Advocates of this alternative feel that, if the practice of annual appropriations is to be maintained, the minimum requirement for a successful and flexible program is to have the funds available for obligation for longer than a year Funds would be committed when a project was fully planned and agreed upon. There would be no need for hurried obligation of funds in order to prevent their lapsing, or the danger of having to withdraw from the project negotiations because the money tentatively earmarked for the project had lapsed.... If funds were available for obligation for longer periods...the flow of aid into each country would not necessarily be in more or less even annual increments, but it would depend in large part upon the rate at which the various countries submitted sound requests and proposals

'A third alternative holds that although extended availability would be helpful, it is not enough. In one way or another, foreign assistance funds must be provided for several years in advance, without going through the annual appropriations process

The Brookings Institution study did not endorse any of these alternatives, but concluded that "if the program is to be continued in any form, its authorization and financing should be placed on a more long-term basis...in order to provide a reasonable opportunity for effective administration.'

Presidential Committee Reports

The President's Citizen Advisers on the Mutual Security Program, headed by Benjamin F. Fairless, March "Our studies lead to the conclusion that, under present world conditions, continuing military assistance expenditures will be required Economic development should be recognized, moreover, as a long-range endeavor. Funds available for economic assistance should be continued. But effort should be made to concentrate economic assistance more upon long-range economic development, and assurances should be given of our intention to continue it over a period of years The United States must...abandon the false hope that collective security costs are temporary.... It is recommended that both the military and economic assistance programs be presented to each Congress for approval rather than to each session of each Congress. This would permit the consideration of a two-year program, and make possible more efficient planning and utilization of funds.

The International Development Advisory Board, headed by Eric Johnston, March 7 recommended to the President 'establishment of an International Development Fund ... to put our program for economic development of underdeveloped countries on a flexible and long-term basis.... The fund should be established for a period of years. Appropriations by Congress should permit the fund to operate for a minimum of three years without requiring additional financing. Such an appropriation would avoid difficulties associated with present annual budgetary reviews by Congress. These annual reviews not only make efficient, long-range planning impossible, but create an appearance of instability, causing confusion at home and abroad,"

Development of Other Countries

A study, The Role of Foreign Aid in the Development of Other Countries, prepared by the Research Center in Economic Development and Cultural Change of the University of Chicago for the Special Senate Committee, released March 7, said: "It is necessary that the United States engage in a sustained and extended program of economic aid to underdeveloped countries.... Since economic aid is of maximum benefit if it is sustained over a period of time, some suitable measures should be taken to insure that it can be extended on a sustained, long-range basis.... Some guaranty of its duration is as important as is the total magnitude of the program.... A program which will continue on a sustained magnitude over a period of 10 to 20 years is a minimum,'

A study, American Private Enterprise, Foreign Economic Development and the Aid Programs, prepared by the American Enterprise Assn. Inc., for the Special Senate Committee, released Feb. 28, said: "Growth of the less-developed countries is a very long-run, not a shortterm problem. This is because the processes of development yield fruit slowly, because most of them must be grafted on to deeply rooted traditional ways of working and organizing economic activity.... The Marshall Plan, which helped to restore a war-damaged but tested socioeconomic system, is not an applicable standard. We must face the fact that an evolutionary program, not a crash effort, will fulfill the technical requirements of economic development in today's less-developed countries."

Economic, Military Continuity

A study, The Objectives of U.S. Economic Assistance Programs, prepared by the Center for International Studies of Massachusetts Institute of Technology for the Special Senate Committee, released Feb. 28, said: "The American interest requires a program of economic development aid to foster self-sustaining growth in the underdeveloped countries of the world. Such a program, if effectively designed and implemented, is our best hope for promoting the evolution of mature democratic societies whose fundamental interests in the world will be compatible with our own.... Since economic growth is inherently a slow process, and since the economic and political results we seek from an economic development program will accrue only over a considerable number of years, the program must have continuity. As an instrument of short-term policy development assistance is wasteful and ineffective. If we have any hope of achieving desirable results from a development-assistance program, we must be clear in our own minds and must make it clear to the rest of the world that this is a program which we propose to pursue consistently for at least five or 10 years and which we will not permit to be affected by change in the international or domestic political climate. If we are not prepared to make this kind of longterm commitment, we should probably not support development assistance programs at all.

A report, The Military Assistance Program of the United States, prepared for the Special Senate Committee by the Institute of War and Peace Studies of Columbia University and the Systems Analysis Corp., released March 21, said: "Up to the present time, there has been a tendency -- both in the executive branch and in the legislative branch -- to deal with the military aid program on a year-to-year basis. The result has been a lack of adequately coordinated long-range programming. This deficiency should be corrected -- by the executive branch, through increased emphasis on adequately coordinated long-range planning and analysis, and by the legislative branch, through effective support of such long-range planning and analysis. Such support by the legislative branch should include the freeing of some of the appropriations for the program from the one-year availability limitation to which such appropriations have heretofore been restricted."

Soviet Activities

A report, Foreign Assistance Activities of the Communist Bloc and Their Implications for the United States, prepared for the Special Senate Committee by the Council for Economic and Industry Research Inc., and released March 14, said: "There is much to be said for United States assistance being independent of Soviet actions in the sense that United States efforts and activities are not specific reactions to specific Soviet actions per se, but are based upon longer-run foreign policy objectives.... It is obviously desirable that such an approach be combined with power to undertake long-run commitments for some portion of the assistance program -- year-to-year operations do not fit adequately the long-term needs of economic growth....

"This type of program has the merit of providing a relatively steady flow of capital, and of avoiding massive fluctuations that could easily disrupt the recipient countries. It has the merit of being dependable; the recipient government would know what to expect. And the recipient government, even if it wished, would not find ready at hand the opportunity to bargain by playing one supplier off against the other.... Most of all, the laying out of a longer-range economic development program would clearly tend to create a long-term foreign policy outlook on the part of the foreign recipient favorable to the United States. The importance of relationships with the United States for the country's development programs would be much greater and more obvious. Since, in fact, United States economic aid tends to be continuous anyway, we might just as well reap all the advantages of such a situation."

Personnel Benefits

A study, The Use of Private Contractors in Foreign Aid Programs, prepared for the Special Senate Committee by Jerome Jacobson Associates and released March 14, said: "It is our view that many of the administrative and organizational problems now besetting the contractor program arise from the continuing absence of clearly formulated concepts on the long-term role of services and of technical assistance in foreign aid.... The year-to-year nature of foreign aid authorizations causes problems in planning for economic development programs.... Until the role of technical assistance has been clarified, it will be difficult to define the proper use of contractors in the aid program."

A study, Personnel for the Mutual Security Program, prepared for the Special Senate Committee by Louis J. Kroeger and Associates and released March 1, said its specific "proposals depend on the assumption that Congress will support the long-range extension of a mutual security program. Without that assurance, the International Cooperation Administration can do little to correct the present conditions."

Area Studies

A report on foreign aid programs in South Asia, prepared for the Special Senate Committee by Dr. Lewis Webster Jones, president of Rutgers University, said: "Economic and technical aid should be organized for the long pull. Outside aid, in varying forms and amounts, will be required until the level of education and productivity has risen to the point where South Asian countries can train their own technical personnel and provide their own capital from internal savings and from export sur-These developments may take from 10 to 50 years. Longer commitments to particular programs and projects are desirable, in order to fit our aid more effectively into the five-year development plans of the receiving countries, as well as to insure the most effective allocation of available funds. The necessity for negotiation every year, on every project, is costly and wasteful."

A report on foreign aid programs in Central America and the Caribbean area, prepared for the Special Senate Committee by James Minotto, former Mutual Security Agency chief in Portugal, and released March 26, said: "It is recommended that the technical assistance program be placed on a more permanent basis. Annual uncertainty over funds hinders effective planning and programming. More financial flexibility is not inconsistent with annual reviews and appropriations by Congress."

Congressional Reaction

President Eisenhower has not yet indicated how much long-term foreign aid authority he will seek from Congress in 1957. In 1956, his request for authority to commit as much as $100 million a year in economic aid for periods up to 10 years was stricken from the Mutual Security Act by the House Foreign Affairs Committee. Current Congressional opinion on the matter from key members of the Senate Foreign Relations and House Foreign Affairs Committees:

• Sen. Mike Mansfield (D Mont.) -- "The only thing I'd like to see given permanent authorization is the Point Four technical assistance program. I would like to see economic aid put on a long-term basis. As for military aid, I think it is the responsibility of the Defense Department to justify its claims that a dollar of foreign aid saves several dollars of defense spending. The various types of foreign aid should be separated."

• Sen. Homer E. Capehart (R Ind.) -- "Long-term or permanent authorization is not the approach to foreign aid I want to take. I want to put our economic aid entirely in the form of loans, with each country given a line of credit at the Export-Import Bank on which it can draw when it comes up with a good project. Military aid should be handled on an annual basis through the Defense Department and technical assistance should be handled on the same basis through the State Department,"

• Sen. J.W. Fulbright (D Ark.) -- "I think some new approach is called for in the foreign aid field. From what I hear, the prospect for major changes in the program this year is rather hopeless. On economic aid, perhaps a five-year commitment to an all-loan program could be obtained. I think the Foreign Relations Committee would go for that, but I doubt that the 'economy bloc' would like it. Military aid should be separated out of the program and put in the Defense Department, but the Secretary of State should have review authority in that field, to keep military programs from getting out of balance with the economy of the country. Even that much of a program cannot get through Congress this year unless...the President acts decisively."

Chairman Thomas S. Gordon of the House Foreign Affairs Committee -- "I haven't gone into the idea of long-term foreign aid authorizations myself. As far as the Committee is concerned, we plan to go along on the year-to-year basis unless developments should force us to look into other possibilities."

• Sen. Hubert H, Humphrey (D Minn.) -- "The United States will sooner or later be driven to a more far-reaching foreign economic policy.... It will continue...probably throughout the lives of our children. Our initial commitment should not be for less than four or five years.... (But) there will be no significant departure in our economic development programs in 1957 unless President Eisenhower gives us both a proposal bearing his name and more than his customarily mild, detached leadership." (Speech, Feb. 12)

● Rep. John M. Vorys (R Ohio) -- "I...invented the idea of annual foreign aid authorizations with the Marshall Plan nine years ago, and I think the system has outlived its usefulness. The Fairless Committee has recommended biennial authorization and appropriation and I would go for that idea. Certain items could be put on even a longerange basis. I think there is good reason for making longer authorization -- say three to five years -- on specific projects,...but I would oppose any such grant of general authority for the whole foreign aid program."

WHO'S FOR, AGAINST HIGHWAY BILLBOARDS?

Unusual public interest -- and lobby pressure -- has been stirred by proposals before Congress to limit the placement of billboards adjacent to the 41,000-mile Interstate Highway System. Two measures have been proposed and hearings have been completed by the Senate Public Works Public Roads Subcommittee. (Weekly Report, p. 421)

One bill (S 963) introduced by Sen. Richard L. Neuberger (D Ore.), a Subcommittee member, would establish a national policy of barring billboards from a 500-foot strip on either side of the interstate highways except for official direction signs, signs advertising the sale of property on which they are located and signs advertising a business conducted on the property. The Federal Government would pay 90 percent of the costs to states of purchasing advertising rights on the 500-foot strips, but no state would be required to carry out this policy.

The other is a proposal, not yet in bill form, made March 18 by Secretary of Commerce Sinclair Weeks. It would establish a national policy of barring billboards from a 750-foot strip on either side of the interstate highways, except for the types of signs specified by Neuberger and signs in areas zoned industrial or commercial. It would leave to the states the decision on whether or how to achieve the national policy. But states which by July 1, 1960, had not conformed to the national policy would be denied 5 percent of the Federal payment for interstate roads within their borders.

Both Neuberger and Weeks advocate billboard control in the interests of highway safety and beauty, but Weeks says Neuberger's plan, though involving additional cost to the Government, would not offer "a sufficient incentive for the states to take the action required." Bertram D. Tallamy, director of the Federal highway program, estimates the cost of acquiring advertising rights on a 750-foot strip on each side of the 41,000-mile interstate network at $240 million.

Neuberger concedes "an additional cost" in his program, but argues that Weeks' proposal would permit a state to zone the entire highway right-of-way commercial or industrial, thereby admitting billboards, and still qualify for its full allotment of Federal aid. Weeks admits this possibility.

Issues in Regulation

There are three main issues in the argument:

● 1. BEAUTY -- Backers of Federal regulation contend the Government has a positive responsibility to preserve the beauty of the area surrounding the new interstate highways. Opponents deny that natural landscapes are necessarily superior to billboard art, and argue that "aesthetics" is not a proper goal of Government policy in any case. Often "beauty" is placed in the scales against "utility," as in this remark by ex-Sen. Scott Lucas (D III., 1939-51), representing a group opposed to Federal control, to Neuberger: "You have a theory of aesthetics. I have a theory of economics. This country was built on economics, not beauty."

- 2. SAFETY -- Backers of regulation, including the American Automobile Assn., argue that billboards are designed to distract motorists' attention, thus constituting a safety hazard. A 1949-52 study by the Minnesota Highway Department agreed with this conclusion. But more recent surveys by Iowa State College and the Michigan Highway Department found ''no significant relationship' between billboards and highway accidents. The billboards' defenders argue they provide stimulation to drivers on dreary stretches of road, prevent drowsiness and help reduce accidents.
- 3. FEDERAL VS. STATE RESPONSIBILITY -- Opponents of Federal billboard legislation argue control of land use is traditionally and constitutionally in the province of state and local authority, and that the diversity of local conditions recommends leaving the authority with state and local governments. A billboard control provision was eliminated from the 1955 highway bill by voice vote after Sen. Walter F. George (D Ga. 1922-57) protested "Federal control of matters...within the jurisdiction of the states."

Backers of Federal control contend that since Federal funds provide 90 percent of the cost of the new interstate roads, the Federal Government has a necessary interest in conditions adjacent to the roads. The Neuberger and Weeks plans, however, have been drafted to keep control of billboards in the hands of the states, with the Federal Government using its funds only to provide incentives or penalties for state action.

For, Against Federal Control

Supported by widespread newspaper publicity, groups interested in highway safety and conservation of nature have moved in to back Federal control of billboards. These groups -- few of which are organized or financed for direct lobbying -- have large memberships, and Members of Congress testify to the volume of mail they have received on the subject. Neuberger encouraged the letterwriting campaign in a letter prepared by his office to answer inquiries on his bill. It says: "Members of Congress always welcome expressions of public opinion such as letters and resolutions from interested groups.... Only a considerable display of public demand for billboard control is likely to overcome the strong opposition of those who have an interest in the continuation of billboard advertising along our new Federally financed interstate highways." (See list, next page.)

Arrayed against these mass-membership groups backing Federal control of billboards are trade groups whose membership is smaller but whose economic stake in the outcome of the legislation is direct and significant. These groups, representing the buyers and sellers of billboard space and the laborers in the industry, are conducting a full-scale offensive against Federal regulation of their business. (See list, next page.)

Groups Against Billboards

Organizations that have taken the lead in the campaign for Federal regulation of billboards include: (A single asterisk (*) indicates the group is registered under the lobby law; a double asterisk () indicates it employs a registered lobbyist, but is not registered itself.)

*American Automobile Assn., with five million members, long has advocated roadside control at the state and local level. This year, for the first time, it urged Federal action to establish proper standards of roadside development, including billboard control, for the new interstate highways. It has endorsed no specific legislation. In addition to testifying before the Public Roads Subcommittee, the AAA has publicized its stand in a newspaper sent to its member auto clubs and to every Member of Congress. "We don't have to ask our members to write letters on this subject," Ross D. Netherton, manager of the legislative department, told CQ. "Just give them the opportunity and they will write." Netherton has furnished material to Subcommittee members on the matter.

American Planning and Civic Assn., with 1,500 members, testified for Federal regulation and has publicized the issue through its own quarterly publication.

The National Council of State Garden Clubs, which claims 400,000 members in 11,000 clubs throughout the United States, sent its legislative chairman to testify for Federal control. Many of its members have written letters on the legislation.

*General Federation of Women's Clubs, with 5.5 million members, endorsed "strict control of roadside development through zoning regulations..." but has taken no direct stand on specific legislation. The national organization has informed state and local groups of the Neuberger proposal, leaving it to them to take whatever action they wish.

American Assn. of Nurserymen Inc., which claims to represent 1,650 firms, sent its executive vice president to support Neuberger's bill. It also advised its members to write in support of the legislation. The nurserymen also have distributed about 40,000 copies of an illustrated booklet, "Deadly Motoring or Planted Safety," advocating roadside landscaping. Copies of the booklet have gone to roadside associations, garden clubs and similar groups.

A number of state roadside councils, co-ordinating agencies for groups interested in protection of roadsides, are supporting Federal billboard regulation. The representative of the Pennsylvania Roadside Council testified for "a million citizens of Pennsylvania, representing every known race and creed and both political parties" who are "unspectacular, average people in almost every way...(except for) their driving determination that their investment in the new interstate highway system is not going to...be used for the benefit and profit of the outdoor advertising industry...."

For More Details

For more information on the arguments for and against Federal billboard control, see Editorial Research Reports, 1957 Vol. I, No. 9, "Billboards and Roadside Controls." For the 1956 Federal-Aid Highway Act, see 1956 Almanac, p. 398. For 1957 hearings on the current proposals for Federal billboard control, 1957 Weekly Report, p. 421.

Groups For Billboards

Organizations that have taken the lead in the campaign against Federal regulation of billboards include (a single asterisk (*) indicates the group is registered under the lobby law; a double asterisk () indicates it employs a registered lobbyist, but is not registered itself):

Outdoor Advertising Assn. of America Inc., a national trade group with 776 member companies which claim to handle over 90 percent of the $200 million or more annual expenditure for outdoor advertising. OAA late in 1956 hired the public relations firm of Hill and Knowlton to carry on an "educational campaign" on bill-board advertising. A Hill and Knowlton spokesman said its efforts to date were concerned largely with presentations made to Department of Commerce officials and the Public Roads Subcommittee.

While OAA has carried out no advertising campaign, a member company, the General Outdoor Advertising Co., placed advertisements stressing the safety value of billboards in the Wall Street Journal, Petroleum Week and the General Federation Clubwoman.

Roadside Business Assn., a group of individual members and trade associations representing businesses that depend on highway trade. The group's registered lobbyist is ex-Sen. Scott W. Lucas (D III. 1939-51) who presented its testimony to the Public Roads Subcommittee. The Association also has engaged the New York public relations firm, Philip Lesly Co., which sent a man to Washington to handle publicity during hearings on the billboard control measures.

Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paper Hangers of America (AFL-CIO), whose national organizer, testifying in opposition to Federal regulation of bill-boards, said he represented "12,000 skilled sign and pictorial painters." On petition from the painters and unions representing electrical workers, sheet metal workers and carpenters, the AFL-CIO executive council Feb. 6 passed a resolution opposing billboard regulation.

These organizations, aided by local groups and trade associations representing particular industries that sell, service or use billboards, have to some degree co-ordinated their opposition to the proposed legislation. Bryce P. Holcomb of the painters union addressed the Cincinnati convention of the Roadside Business Assn. The Roadside Business Assn., and the Outdoor Advertising Assn. of America Inc. held a joint meeting in February and issued a joint statement opposing Federal billboard control.

Role of Newspapers

Opponents of Federal billboard regulation have charged that newspapers used their editorial columns to support such regulation because billboards are a competing advertising medium. Lucas March 21 said that "...almost all the press supports some form of highway advertising limitation -- hardly an astounding phenomenon in view of the fact that this segment of the press is behind a movement to restrict, if not eliminate, a competing medium of advertising."

The letter from four union presidents to the AFL-CIO executive council said "a great deal of the inspiration for this campaign (for regulation) originates among the publishers, notably newspapers and magazines, who apparently desire the full advertising budgets or the lion's share diverted into their channels rather than partly in outdoor displays."

1957 CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEE, SUBCOMMITTEE ASSIGNMENTS

An up-to-date list of Congressional standing committees, subcommittees, their functions, membership and telephone numbers. • LISTING -- Democrats are listed on the left, Republicans on the right in order of their seniority on the committee

• TELEPHONE NUMBERS -- Call NAtional 8-3120 and ask for the extension shown unless the list indicates otherwise. The parent committee handles calls for subcommittees without individual telephone extensions.

◆ KEY -- Full committee names are in boldface type, while subcommittee names are capitalized. *Asterisk indicates ex officio member. † Dagger indicates the committee member waived his seniority to the next ranking member of his party because of his seniority on another committee.

HELLS CANYON

The U.S. Supreme Court April 1 denied an appeal by public power groups for review of the Federal Power Commission's licensing of three private power company dams in Hells Canyon. The licensing was upheld Oct. 9, 1956, by the U.S. Court of Appeals. The Supreme Court appeal was made by the National Hells Canyon Assn., National Rural Electric Cooperative Assn. and eight Washington State public utility districts. Briefs supporting the appeal were filed by the states of Washington and Oregon. The Court's decision was announced in a brief order which noted only that Justice William O. Douglas felt the case should have been reviewed. Congressional hearings on proposed legislation for a Federal power project were held in March. (Weekly Report, p. 302)

In another decision, the Court 8-0 held that a group of employers who bargain jointly with a union can legally act together in effecting a general lockout to resist a strike at any one plant.

Capitol Briefs

WOMAN NAMED ASSOCIATE PRESS SECRETARY

President Eisenhower April 4 named Mrs. Anne Wheaton, director of women's publicity for the GOP National Committee, to replace Murray Snyder as an assistant press secretary in the White House.

REORGANIZATION

President Eisenhower April 1, in a special message to Congress, asked for a four-year extension of the Reorganization Act of 1949, due to expire June 1. The President did not request any changes in the Act, but urged Congress to continue its "practical arrangements," so both he and Congress "can carry forward their cooperative endeavors to provide the best possible management of the public business." Extensions of the Act were granted previously in 1953 and 1955.

HOUSING CREDIT EASED

The White House March 29 announced a reduction, to 2 percent, in the required down-payment on homes purchased with Federal Housing Administration-insured loans, and modifications of Federal Home Loan Bank regulations. The White House said the changes would "make it easier for veterans to buy homes under the FHA program if the supply of funds for Veterans Administration-guaranteed loans...continues to decline." (Weekly Report, p. 416)

MISSILE SUPPLY

Sen. Stuart Symington (D Mo.), Air Force Secretary for President Truman, March 30 said "we just don't have any supersonic missiles" to spare for any allies, despite an announced agreement for the United States to supply missiles to Britain. (Weekly Report, p. 395)

Eisenhower Meets Press

President Eisenhower April 3 told the seventh news conference of his second term that by no means did he consider the school aid bill a casualty of Congressional budget cutting. He said he was so disappointed at the failure of Congress to pass an aid bill in 1956 that he asked in 1957 for a four-year program instead of one for five years, He said Federal aid was necessary to overcome classroom shortages partially brought about by national emergencies. He emphasized that the program was to be temporary only and should stop after four years.

The President also said:

He tried whenever possible to get Members of Congress, particularly Republicans, to understand that certain funds were necessary to continue established programs.

He hoped there would be a tax cut before the end of his second term, but would not speculate as to when. Rising national production and increasing population leading to more revenue would help make a tax cut possible, he said.

The country must not go to deficit spending. He said lower Federal spending would be better for the economy, but that established programs had to be paid for. He said he hoped many programs could be taken over by the states.

His suggestions for dealing with Presidential disability were with the idea that there were honest people in the Government and that one group would not be trying to usurp powers from another. He said the President and the Vice President were the only two officials elected by the Nation as a whole, and that the Cabinet was presumed friendly to the President and would carry out his wishes. The Congressional power to impeach a President, he continued, was the final protection for the people from those who might want to usurp the Presidency. (Weekly Report, p. 419)

Reports that he intended to resign from office were the worst rot he had heard since he had been in office.

The $4.4 billion foreign aid program he had recommended was the very best estimate of what was needed to keep the U.S. secure. That did not mean, he said, that there were not economies to be made in the program.

He had never given the Chinese Nationalists specific promises of U.S. protection for the off-shore China islands of Quemoy and Matsu; Israeli Prime Minister Ben-Gurion had not brought up in their correspondence whether Israel should have free access through the Suez Canal.

He did not look upon the results of elections in Texas and Michigan as good omens for the Republicans, but the party was alert to the situation and was ready to work hard. (Weekly Report, p. 422)

QUAKERS DEFEND 5th AMENDMENT USE

The Society of Friends (Quakers) March 26 received a report defending the use of the Fifth Amendment as a protection against self-incrimination. A committee on civil rights of the Society's 277th annual convention in Philadelphia deplored the "automatic and unthinking assumptions of guilt" when the Fifth Amendment is taken by a witness. The committee report said the drafters of the Bill of Rights knew they were erecting a "shelter of the guilty as well as a protection for the innocent." The committee said the AFL-CIO was the most notable of private groups imposing penalties for reliance on the Fifth Amendment. (Weekly Report, p. 178)

LABOR RACKETEERING

The AFL-CIO executive council March 29 voted unanimously to suspend Dave Beck, Teamsters Union president, as an AFL-CIO vice president and member of the council. Beck was among eight absentees from the meeting of the 28-member council, called by AFL-CIO President George Meany March 26. The council also directed Meany to file formal charges with it against Beck for "his actions in bringing the labor movement into disrepute and his failure to explain the charges against him." Independent of the Beck suspension, the executive council directed the AFL-CIO ethical practices committee to "investigate and determine" whether the Teamsters Union was "substantially dominated or controlled by corrupt influences." (Weekly Report, p. 405)

The executive council May 20 will hear the charges against Beck, who will be invited to attend. Meany said "if Beck shows up at that hearing, he likely will have the 'judicial atmosphere' -- including the right of cross-examination and presentation of charges -- (Beck) said was absent at his Senate committee appearances." (Weekly Report, p. 414) The ethical practices committee will meet May 6 for a hearing of corruption charges against the Teamsters Union, if the union wanted a hearing, committee chairman Al Hayes said.

Beck March 28 said he planned a "million-dollar topnotch public relations campaign to tell the other side of the story -- our side." Teamsters Secretary-Treasurer John English March 29 said that as long as he was secretary-treasurer, he would oppose "any use of the union's funds for that purpose." English had opposed union purchase of Beck's Seattle home and his use of it rent and tax free, and had refused to pay $50,000 in union money for Beck's home furnishing, although it was finally authorized at Beck's urging. The Teamsters' executive board April 1 turned down Beck's request for $1 million, but authorized $200,000 for a one-year advertising program "limited strictly to telling the Teamsters' story."

James R. Hoffa, Central Conference of Teamsters chairman, and Hyman I. Fischbach, a former counsel for Congressional committees, March 29 pleaded not guilty to charges of bribery and conspiracy before a Federal District Court in Washington, D.C. (Weekly Report, p. 337)

Mail Report

A CQ spot check of mail received by Members of Congress during the week indicated:

The most popular issue was current Government spending levels with most letters urging budget cuts.

Constituents expressed considerable interest on taxes and foreign aid with cuts urged in both.

Congressmen contacted indicated their mail was "normal." One Senate office reported a campaign on the part of retailers opposed to extension of minimum wage coverage was evident.

McCARTHY-REUTHER FEUD

Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy (R Wis.) March 28 wired United Auto Workers (AFL-CIO) President Walter P. Reuther charging him with practicing a "double standard of morality" in denouncing Teamsters Union President Dave Beck for taking the Fifth Amendment in the Senate rackets probe. (Weekly Report, p. 414)

rackets probe. (Weekly Report, p. 414)

McCarthy said Reuther was "lacking in so forthright a position" when open and concealed Communists operating within the CIO took the Fifth Amendment under questioning by Congressional committees. McCarthy said he agreed it was "improper for Dave Beck to take the Fifth Amendment on questions dealing with union funds." However, McCarthy said, "the same rule should apply where treason or Communism is involved."

In a counter-charge, Reuther March 29 accused McCarthy of "appalling ignorance or a deliberate distortion" of Reuther's stand on Communists in the labor movement. Reuther said "at the very time the people in the UAW leadership were fighting to defeat Communist leaders in the UAW, those same Communist leaders in 1946 were supporting your campaign in Wisconsin for the U.S. Senate."

General

Within each category are Senate bills in chronological order followed by House bills in chronological order. Bills are described as follows: Bill number, brief description of provisions, sponsor's name, date introduced and committee to which bill was assigned. Bills sponsored by more than one Senator are listed under the first sponsor, with additional sponsors listed. Private bills are not listed.

In the House identical bills are sponsored by several Members but each bill has only one sponsor and one number. In such cases only the first bill introduced -- that with the lowest bill number -- is described in full. Bills introduced subsequently during the period and identical in nature are cited back to the earliest bills. Private bills are not listed.

Congressional Quiz

PRESIDENTIAL DISABILITY

President Fisenhower has proposed a constitutional amendment to provide for delegation of authority in case of the temporary disability of a President. How's your knowledge of this subject? Try for 3 out of 5.

- Q--President Fisenhower's proposal would require which of the following to decide when the President was unable to fulfill his duties: (a) a joint Congressional-Cabinet committee; (b) the Vice President; (c) the Senate; (d) the Cabinet?
 - A--(d). The Cabinet would make the decision by a majority vote if the Chief Fxecutive himself were unable or unwilling to make it.
- Q--True or false: The Constitution now states that the Supreme Court should decide when a President is unable to discharge the duties of his office.
 - A--False. Article II, Section 1 says: "In case of the removal of the President from office, or of his death, resignation or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the Vice President..." But it does not say who is to determine when the President can't handle his duties.

- O--What Presidents, other than President Eisenhower, have suffered extended periods of disability?
 - A--President James A, Garfield performed only one official act in the 80 days between the time he was shot and his death in 1881. Due to his illness, President Woodrow Wilson did not meet with his Cabinet from September, 1919, until April, 1920, and then was able to carry out few of his duties until the end of his term in 1921.
- 4. Q--Has any Congressional action been taken to make provisions for Presidential disability?
 - A--A special House Judiciary subcommittee held hearings on the problem in April, 1956, but issued no report. Several Members of Congress have plans they say they will offer during this session.
- O--True or false: An American citizen of another political party than that of the President could succeed him if necessary.
 - A--True. The Presidential Succession Act of 1947 provided that, if the Vice President were not available, the Speaker of the House and the President Pro Tem. of the Senate, in that order, would succeed the President.

The Week In Congress

Long-Term Aid Specialists called in by Congress last year to scrutinize the foreign aid program have come up with a major conclusion that the legislators probably won't accept. The specialists are in remarkable agreement that foreign aid would work better if it were given a long-term lease. America's overseas economic efforts, they say, have been crippled by a nagging sense of insecurity induced by too-close Congressional supervision. The recommended cure is to give foreign aid a guaranteed, long-term income of its own. (Page 423)

Surplus Barter

The Senate extended for one year permission for the sale of farm surpluses for the currency of friendly foreign countries. In so doing, it increased the authorization for foreign sales from $3 billion to $4 billion and relaxed restrictions against bartering with Russian satellites. Senate Minority Leader William F. Knowland (R Calif.) and a majority of Senate Republicans attempted to eliminate the provision relaxing Red satellite dealings, but 19 Republicans joined all but two Democrats to reject Knowland's amendment. (Page 417)

Civil Rights

The report of the House Judiciary Committee on civil rights legislation finally reached the House when southern opponents of the measure finished writing their dissent. Now the bill must go through the House Rules Committee before it can come to a floor vote. (Page 419)

Presidential Disability

A special House subcommittee began hearings on ways to determine when and how the Vice President could temporarily take over the office of the President when the Chief Executive was disabled. President Eisenhower gave Congressional leaders his solution to the problem: the President himself could inform the Vice President that he wished to be temporarily relieved of his duties, or, if the President was unwilling or unable to decide on his disability, a majority vote of the Cabinet would determine whether he was able to continue his duties. Congressional leaders generally were cool to the President's plan. (Page 419)

Texas Election

Republican hopes to overturn Democratic control of the Senate were dashed when Texas elected Ralph Yarborough to the Senate to take over from interim Sen. William Blakley (D), Yarborough and another Democrat, Rep. Martin Dies, both polled more votes than the Republican candidate, Thad Hutcheson, Yarborough has been identified with the "liberal" wing of the Texas Democratic party while Dies was part of the "conservative" element. (Page 422)

Billboards

Congress is sitting in solemn judgment on the case of Some Citizens vs. the Billboard Industry, and the solons are getting an earful of advice on what their verdict should be. Congressional mailbags are full of the subject. What started March 18 as a three-day hearing by a Senate subcommittee has just finished. At issue are proposals for the Federal Government to control billboards on the new, 41,000-mile interstate highway system, either by paying the states that limit roadside advertising or penalizing the states that do not. The first approach is proposed by Sen. Richard L. Neuberger (D Ore.) and the second has the endorsement of the Administration. (Page 427)

Teamster Troubles

Teamsters Union troubles are mounting as a result of the special Senate committee's hearings into possible labor-management racketeering. Union President Dave Beck's Fifth Amendment pleas led to his suspension as an AFL-CIO vice president and charges against the Union to be considered by the AFL-CIO's ethical practices committee. A few days later, the Teamsters executive board declined to go along with Beck's announcement of a million-dollar publicity campaign to tell the Teamsters' story. (Page 430)
